Speakers Are Earnest
As They Talk of Noble Work of Elder

A notable gathering of church people assembled at the Central Methodist church of Albany last evening to pay tribute to the life and services of Dr. Walter E. McGlawn who next week terminates his labors as presiding elder of the Central District. In addition to being presiding elder in this section for four years, Dr. McGlawn was pastor of the Central Methodist church for a term of years. In the tributes paid, Mrs. McGlawn the wife of the presiding elder shared equally with her distinguished husband.

In addition to the eloquent opening address by Dr. J. L. Gunter, who presided at the meeting there were five formal addresses as follows: "McGlawn a pastor," by Judge L. P. Troup, "McGlawn, a friend" by Charles W. Matthews; "McGlawn, a man" by Hon. A. G. Patterson of Montgomery formerly a member of the Central Methodist church; "McGlawn, a fellow pastor" by Dr. F. L. Goodwin, pastor of the Westminster Presbyterian church and "McGlawn an elder" by Dr. James D. Hunter, pastor of the Central Methodist church.

Dr. McGlawn replied feelingly to the beautiful tributes paid. Refreshments were served in the Sunday school room of the church at the close of the speaking.

Prayer by Rev. A. L. Mathison

At the opening, Dr. Gunter who presided throughout the evening and introduced each speaker called on Rev. A. L. Mathison, pastor of the Ninth Street Methodist church who lead the company in prayer. Rev. Mathison's invocation was given with the entire assembly standing. The final prayer was by Dr. L. F. Goodwin.

The musical numbers were: "Praise Ye the Lord" by the quartette composed of Mrs. H. H. Fulliam, Miss Imogene Winton, Morris Ford and J. D. Ligon, with Mrs. H. O. Troup piano accompanist, "Elder McGlawn" by Ligon, Troup, Ford and Burr, "What's the matter with McGlawn," by Ligon, Troup, Ford and Burr.

In speaking at the opening Dr. Gunter said in part:

"I voice the sentiment of the entire membership of Albany Central Methodist church in saying that we have kept pace with progress and today our church is justly regarded as one of the strong churches of the North Alabama Conference."

"Brother McGlawn your life is an open book. Since joining the conference, you have given freely of your time, your thought and your strong personality. You have risen from an obscure minister, on trial, to the much coveted place a member of the Bishop's council.

"As a pastor you have ministered unto the people, with a sincere devotion to every duty, earnestly pleading with us to seek out true happiness in the paths of rectitude and peace. You stay with us shall ever be regarded with grateful remembrance."

The speeches of Messrs. Troup, Matthews, Patterson, Hunter and Goodwin were all charged with love and respect for Dr. and Mrs. McGlawn and much regret was expressed at their early departure.

Today's Grid Card Interesting; Cullman and Hartelle Romp Over

The football battles over the nation call for much attention on the part of players, coaches, spectators, sport writers and every other class of folks that are interested in America's greatest game. At this time of the year baseball is far surpassed in the interest over the country, baseball is forgotten, every college man, every fan who leans toward an institution of learning feels that the world will come to an end if the big team of their hopes fails to pull through. Probably the most interesting game of the southern section is the fight in Atlanta between Alabama and Georgia Tech. Sport writers over the country are declaring that it is an impossibility for the Crimson to score over Tech defense and the Techmen to pierce the Alabama defense. In practically every case it has been a repetition of last year's classic predict-while Cullman rolled up a total of 60 to 0 over the Normal folks. Both games were upsets from a standpoint of scoring and the machines of the nearby schools functioned like well oiled machinery and bowled over their opponents with little difficulty.

The officials for this afternoon's fracas between the Lawrence County high school and the Y. M. C. A. Independents have been announced as Coach Webb, referee, Ernest Morrow, umpire, Earl Hodson, head linesman.

Every southerner who prays is sending up petitions for the defeat of the Literary Digest poll at the polls.

This summer and fall we have obtained many road improvements. Wouldn't it be a good idea to start now our plans for next spring's work?

Tennessee evidently doesn't intend to provide material for headline writers by repeating its vote of 1920.

The election has already helped the wheat farmers. Of course the cotton farmers count. They live south of the Mason and Dixon line.

It must be borne in mind that there is no law against people voting as often as they please in a straw vote contest.

There used to be a lot of talk of brain fever, but the disease seems to be about extinct for lack of material.

"Al" Jolson, the comedian, deserves a congressional decoration. He made President Coolidge laugh aloud.

The candidates always claim they will save the people from the bow-wows, i. e. from the other politicians.

What chance is there to get the price of fuel down, with such cold people as C. Coolidge and Charles E. Hughes at the head of things.

Perhaps if he could guarantee them as much hair as he has, parents would consider naming children after LaFollette.

If those who are thinking of building still more deadly war engines knew they would have to use them they would turn their attention to other matters.

COL. GEORGE HARVEY'S LATEST ADVICE RECEIVED WITH A LAUGH

Col. George Harvey never very dear to the American people since his London speech of some years ago charging that America entered the world war not from the highest motives, has not bettered himself with Democrats by advocating that Davis come down and "save the country from the menace of LaFollette."

The Democrats were not responsible for the candidacy of LaFollette so the New York Times points out. The Wisconsin senator is a Republican and the Democrats should not be called upon to give up on LaFollette's account.

Harvey doubtless fears that if the presidential election is not settled in the electoral college, that either Davis or Bryan will be made president.

There are about as many Americans who want Davis as there are other Americans who will vote for Coolidge, and there are quite as many who are as ready to trust Charles Bryan and General Dawes.

It is not figured by many that the LaFollette-Wheeler ticket has a chance. So after all, Col. Harvey is afraid his old original party the Democratic party will come into power led either Davis or Bryan. Col Harvey's room was considered better than his company and support by Woodrow Wilson, and Democrats today will thank the former Republican Ambassador to the court of St. James to keep his advice until called upon for an opinion.

It is said that since Davis has shown such remarkable gains of late that the Democratic leaders are giving Colonel Harvey "the horse laugh."

THE UNITED STATES MAY AGAIN BE DRAWN INTO THE LEAGUE CONTROVERSY

While the United States seems satisfied with the world as it is, as regards ways and means for outlawing war, many other nations are taking active steps to make war illegal. The most notable pro-peace action taken lately was by the League of Nations council in signing what is known as the "Geneva Protocol." That agreement is said to mean that any nation which in the future shall refuse to submit an international dispute to arbitration will be considered "the aggressor nation" by the many nations belonging to the league. Against such an aggressor nation the league would be expected to establish certain sanctions, such as to refuse to float loans, the breaking of all diplomatic relations, the establishing of a peaceful blockade, and the tightening of the blockade until the offending nation should be cut off from all other nations, and finally the league of nations might use force of arms against the aggressor nation.

The enemies of the League of Nations as advocated by Woodrow Wilson are already attacking the Geneva protocol and saying that the league is seeking to set up a super state in the world, without the consent of the United States of America. And exactly the same arguments are being used against the protocol as were used against the covenant of the league of nations in the United States Senate some years ago.

It is well to recall that about all the nations, except ours and Germany and Russia are now in the League of Nations. So it does not go with the mere saying that "the league is deceased."

When the American people get through with their present national elections, stranger things have happened than that will be called upon to say "yes" or "no" to the terms of the Geneva protocol. At any rate if it is a fact that the spirit of Woodrow Wilson is still marching on, and if there are really a considerable number of Americans who want laws passed against war, we may be expected to see some action taken looking to America actually entering the League of Nations or at least, agreeing to co-operate with the league in preventing war and bloodshed.

WHEN REASON REIGNS

The most difficult thing to do is to think. If anyone should doubt it, let him try it some time.

To rise above prejudice, and passion and personal interest and think a subject through to an inevitable, logical conclusion, starting from an axiom and keeping in mind only demonstrable facts and proved principles, ah, this is a feat.

Our fears, our hopes, our avarice, our ingrained prejudices, our hatreds, determine our opinions and convictions more often than our reason. He is a big man who can separate himself wholly from the narrowness of personal aversions and dislikes and the pettiness of selfish interest and give a clear, unbiased judgment upon an issue in which he is more or less personally concerned.

One of the sure signs that a person is thinking in the terms of prejudice and passion rather than of rational thought is his quick descent in an argument to the use of epithets and the impugning of motives.

It is much easier to transfix your opponent with an opprobrious ad., than to disprove his argument, much simpler to overwhelm him with billingsgate than to contradict his facts, easier to impute base motives than to prove his logic fallacious.

So fundamentalist calls the liberal "anti-Christ" and modernist retorts "old fogey." Republican calls the Democrat "radical" and the progressive "red" and they return the compliment by sneering allusion to Wall Street. Our friends of the religious press are sometimes eloquent in the language of vituperation, and while in one column there may be a tearful plea for tolerance and gentle sympathy in the treatment of all questions, throughout the other pages the vocabulary of abuse is exhausted, and the epithets bigot, fanatic and liar are the simplest and the kindest.

But while there may be temporary applause for the vehement editor who lays about him with the most uproarious verbal lashings, because the populace always loves a fight, in the long run prejudice and passion and hatred must yield to facts and reason.—Exchange.

A TRAIN OF THOUGHTSFor the Sabbath and Other Days

By J. E. Blair

None who desire to be fair seek to deny the wisdom of the ancients—but they took wisdom for themselves. They understood not "that it is not what we have but what we share." There is no disputing that the non-Christian ancients understood about love and pity, but they kept too much of self mixed up with those noble feelings.

A scene toward the last of the Iliad shows Priam and Achilles the victor, by begging the mutilated body of his best beloved son and by reminding Achilles of the victor's father who is far away. But Achilles mourns because he will never see his father again, and Priam mourns over his own ruin and the death of his many sons in battle. Those men did not mourn for love of each other although sorrow had brought them close together. The record shows that Christ alone manifested pure unselfish love. But did Christ have unselfish love? He certainly did, or how could He have lived and died for a hostile world. He died for His enemies. He lived for men who He knew would play Him false, and finally betray him into the hands of Roman soldiers. In a measure others than Christ have done what He did, but never from as pure unmixed motives. Many have dared to die for good men; but Christ died for evil unappreciative men. To revert to the ancients—many of them taught wonderful codes of righteousness but none of them even knew the code of love. They were not inspired by the Great Lover, and they were not governed by "The Law of Love." Intellectually shrewd enemies of Christianity, have held up some of the best of the ancients and said "they were Christians and did not know it." Such have singled out Seneca especially—quoted his reported saying: "We must succor our enemies with a friendly hand," and said Seneca was a Christian although there is no record of his ever acknowledging Christ as his Savior.

Besides the record shows that Seneca committed suicide at the age of 65. Quite a different ending from the life of the triumphant St. Paul who declared a crown of righteousness awaited him, and every one else who "love" Christ's appearing. No just person would want to detract from the ancient peoples—they are "bone of our bone and flesh of our flesh." They were good many in many instances, "but time makes ancient good uncouth, we must ever up and onward or we keep abreast of truth." In other words just as sure as Christ is the TRUTH, He is away in advance of just ordinary men. But we must seek to catch up to Him, for He is our example. He even calls us to

WHY GO TO CHURCH?

"GO to church! Go to church! This message is to those who do go to church—to those who know the benefits and blessings of worship. Every one who attends church becomes a missionary for the cause of increased church attendance. "Go out into the highways and hedges and bring in those who are found there, that my house may be full," from the Bible. Go to church yourself, certainly, but also bring in those who are not going to church. Help to get there the lame, the halt, the blind, in order that they may not lose the blessing in store for those who assemble themselves together for worship."—By Rev. A. L. Mathison, pastor of the Ninth Street Methodist Church.

THE FOLLOWING LETTER HAS BEEN DISPATCHED TO REV. W. P. McGRAW AND IS SELF EXPLANATORY.

Hartselle, Ala.

Oct. 22, 1924.

Rev. W. P. McGraw,
Decatur, Alabama.
Dear Bro. McGraw.

We, the members of the Board of Stewards of the Hartselle Methodist church, do earnestly request that you recommend and urge to the full extent of your ability that the Bishop send our beloved Brother, R. W. Anderson back to Hartselle, Alabama.

On account of the Godly life, the splendid leadership, the superior ability as a preacher, and the high esteem in which he is held not only by our own membership but by the citizenship of the entire community. We feel that to move him at this time would not be for the best, either for him, or the congregation.

This request was authorized by the board of stewards at their regular meeting held on October 21st.

J. B. LEEMAN,
Chairman Board of Stewards

The following resolution was unanimously adopted at the last quarterly conference held at the First Methodist church last Thursday night and was ordered written into the minutes of the conference.

WHEREAS: Rev. W. P. McGraw has so very efficiently served the Decatur district as Presiding Elder for 4 years, the allotted time to a Methodist preacher, and that the Hartselle charge has been the beneficiary of its share of this service, it is resolved that this conference tender him a vote of thanks for the Christian watch care he has exercised over us and with his departure to other fields of work he may be assured that our prayers go with him, that he may long to continue his work in the Master's vineyard.

Signed: J. H. Riddle, Jno. T. Cooper, M. G. Vest.

DELIGHTFUL PRE-NUPITAL AFFAIR TENDERED MISS GRICE

A delightful pre-nuptial affair was tendered Miss Willis Maude Grice, an early November bride to be at the hospitable home of Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Gully on last Thursday evening. The scheme of Hallowe'en was carried out in the decorations, the pretty home presenting a beautiful appearance in the sombre colors of fall.

Besides the host and hostess, the invited guests were as follows: Misses Paraeles Hughes, Clyde Tolleson, Gladys Stewart, Elizabeth Stewart, Lois Nelson, Mattie Rene Grice, Mrs. W. H. Wedde and the bride to be, Miss Willie Maude Grice.

Rook was played until a late hour after which a delightful salad course was served.

In the game of rook Miss Clyde Tolleson won first prize, and Miss Paraeles Hughes the booby prize.

MR. AND MRS. A. POLYTINSKY ENTERTAIN AT HOTEL HILDA

Mr. and Mrs. A. Polytinsky were hosts to Mr. Hargrove of Decatur, and Miss Willis Maude Grice of Hartselle last Sunday evening, entertaining in a very elaborate manner complimentary to the prospective bride and groom whose marriage is to occur early in November. The dinner was served in several courses and was a most happy event for all who attended.

A serious and costly breakdown happened at the plant of the Alabama Cotton and Grain ginnery last Friday morning, when in attempting to run an unusually large bale of cotton through the press, a press wheel was stripped of its cogs, necessitating the shutting down of the plant until late Friday afternoon, a new press wheel coming to them on No. 2 in the afternoon.

The usual song service at the First Methodist church will be augmented on next Sunday at both services, it being the last sermon preached by the pastor, Rev. R. W. Anderson prior to his going to conference.

The high school orchestra will render music at the morning service, which is the custom of the pastor to devote to children's day every fourth Sunday morning at the eleven o'clock service. At night Mrs. Chester J. Lee will have charge of the song service, when in addition to the regular songs some solos and quartettes will be rendered. This will not be in the na-

The youth bowed to him acknowledgement.

"Tell me, O mighty Sakr-el-Bahr," he begged, "how it came to pass that having reached those distant shores thou wert content to take thence but two poor slaves, since with thy followers and the favor of the All-seeing thou might easily have taken fifty times that number."

And he looked ingenuously into the corsair's swarthy, rugged face, whilst Asad frowned thoughtfully, for the thought was one that had occurred to him already.

It became necessary that Sakr-el-Bahr should lie to clear himself. Here no high-sounding phrase of faith would answer. An explanation was unavoidable, and he was conscious that he could not afford one that did not go a little lame.

"Why, as to that," said he, "these prisoners were wrested from the first house upon which we came, and their capture occasioned some alarm. Moreover, it was night time when we landed, and I dared not adventure the lives of my followers by taking them farther from the ship and attacking a village which might have risen to cut off our good retreat."

The frown remained stamped upon the brow of Asad, as Marzak slyly observed.

"Yet Othmani," said he, "urged thee to fall upon a slumbering village all unconscious of thy presence, and thou didst refuse."

Asad looked up sharply at that and Sakr-el-Bahr realized with a tightening about the heart something of the undercurrents at work against him and all the pains that had been taken to glean information that might be used to his undoing.

"Is it so?" demanded Marzak, looking from his son to his lieutenant with that lowering look that rendered his face evil and cruel.

Sakr-el-Bahr took a high tone. He met Asad's glance with an eye of challenge.

"And if it were so, my lord?" he demanded.

"I asked thee is it so."

"Aye, but knowing thy wisdom I disbelieved my ears," said Sakr-el-Bahr.

"Shall it signify what Othmani may have said? Do I take my orders or am I to be guided by Othmani? If so, best set Othmani in my place, give him the command and the responsibility for the lives of the faithful who fight beside him." He ended with an indignant snort.

"Thou art overquick to anger," Asad reproved him, scowling still.

"And by the Head of Allah, who will deny my right to it? Am I to conduct such an enterprise as this from which I am returned laden with spoils that might well be the fruits of a year's raiding, to be questioned by a beardless stripling as to why I was not guided by Othmani?"

He heaved himself up and stood towering there in the intensity of a passion that was entirely simulated. He must bluster here, and crush down suspicion with whirling periods and broad, fierce gestures.

"To what should Othmani have guided me?" he demanded scornfully. "Could he have guided me to more than I have this day laid at thy feet? What I have done speaks eloquently with its own voice. What he would have had me do might well have ended in disaster. Had it so ended, would the blame of it have fallen upon Othmani? Nay, by Allah! but upon me. And upon me rest then the credit, and let none dare question it without better cause."

Now these were daring words to address to the tyrant Asad, and still more daring was the tone, the light, hard eyes aflash and the sweeping gestures of contempt with which they were delivered. But of his ascendancy over the Basha there was no doubt. And here now was proof of it.

Asad almost cowered before his fury. The scowl faded from his face to be replaced by an expression of dismay.

"Nay, nay, Sakr-el-Bahr, this tone!" he cried.

Sakr-el-Bahr, having slammed the door of conciliation in the face of the Basha, now opened it again. He became instantly submissive.

"Forgive it," he said. "Blame the devotion of thy servant to thee and to the Faith he serves with little reck of life. In this very expedition was I wounded nigh unto death. The livid scar of it is a dumb witness to my zeal. Where are thy scars, Marzak?"

Marzak quailed before the sudden blaze of that question, and Sakr-el-Bahr laughed softly in contempt.

"Sit," Asad bade him. "I have been less than just."

"Thou art the very fount and spring of justice, O my lord, as thine admission proves," protested the corsair.

He sat down again, folding his legs under him.

Harrison Desires Ford Substitute

(Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, Oct. 25.—Senator Harrison, democrat, Mississippi, one of the supporters of Henry Ford's offer for Muscle Shoals, said today that since Ford had withdrawn his bid, it remained for those favoring the bid to get together on a substitute proposition for Muscle Shoals.

He declared he was opposed to all of the remaining proposals and favored a plan for the government to complete the construction of the property and operate it for the best interests of the people.

"If some other reputable individual would present a plan similar to Ford's I would favor it," the Mississippi senator asserted.

"The Norris bill has the right idea, but it is crudely drawn," he said.
